TRACK & FIELD ATHLETICS – OLYMPIC RECORD PROGRESSIONS

Following are the Olympic record progressions for the events on the current program. The marks must have been set under conditions that would currently qualify it for record consideration, the only exception to this being the early tracks which were often slightly oversized (from 500 metres up to ½ mile). Marks set in other circumstances are listed separately or so noted. Marks designated as world records are based on the various editions of Richard Hymans' book Progression of World Best Performances and Official IAAF Records.

Each line lists, in order: mark, finish (or heat), name, country, site, and date. Field event marks are given both in metric and imperial measure. All conversions are done according to the IAAF/Sparks' tables.

Altitude assisted marks are noted in the affected events. In addition, a low-altitude progression is provided so that the reader can tell what the best "sea-level" performances have been. The low-altitude progressions list the best mark pre-1968, followed by the progression if one deletes the 1968 marks. Automatic timing was present as early as 1932, but did not become official until 1972. Consequently, we have given the progression according to hand times through 1968, although the automatic time is noted, where known, and, in addition, a separate automatic record progression is given. Wind-aided marks that bettered the Olympic record, in affected events, are noted, but the progression continues with the actual Olympic record.

Abbreviations:

A = altitude > 1000 metres
w = wind > 2.0 metres/second, the allowable limit s = semi-final q = quarter-final
h = heat
o = clearance in vertical jumps
x = miss in vertical jumps
! = inferior mark within a series
Q = mark made in qualifying
WR = world record
WRa = world record, automatic timing
Dec = mark made in decathlon competition
Pen = mark made in pentathlon competition
Hep = mark made in heptathlon competition

*The opening height at Athens in 1896 was 1.50 metres [4-11] and all five competitors cleared the height. The jumping order at Athens is unknown, but there were presumably multiple other "Olympic records" recorded. Clark's winning effort and his earlier clearance at 1.675 are the first listed as only he cleared those heights.

*Made in the conventional manner, but in the freestyle competition held prior to the regular competition.

#Since 1984, the javelin design has changed several times.

§Saaristo's mark was made in the both arms combined competition, with his third effort with his right arm.

*Wieslander's and Osborn's marks, though credited as Olympic records after Thorpe's disqualification, were inferior to Thorpe's record on all scoring tables.

‡Although credited as a world record, Osborn's mark was inferior to Thorpe's world record that had been stricken from the record books.

#The 1985 scores for Mathias, Campbell, Yang, Johnson, and Toomey are those computed using automatic times in the running events, where known. Of those, automatic times are known for all events except the 400 metres and 1,500 metres at Rome, presumably because of poor light for the evening events. Automatic times are listed above, where known. The original scores listed in the second column in these cases are the official ones, using hand times. The original hand times, and the corresponding 1985 scores, are as follows: Mathias: 7,580; 10.9, 50.2, 14.7, 4:50.8; Campbell: 7,565; 10.8, 48.8, 14.0, 4:50.6; Johnson: 7,901; 10.9, 15.3; Yang: 7,820; 10.7, 14.6; and Toomey 8,064; 10.4, 45.6, 14.9, 4:57.1.

†Thompson's mark was not a world record on the 1977 tables but when the 1985 tables came into use, it became equal to Hingsen's world record and he was given credit for a world record.

*Né Stefan Walasiewicz, Stanisława Walasiewicz competed as a woman for many years. After her death in 1983, it was discovered that she was a gynandromorph, i.e., possessing internal sexual characteristics of both sexes. This does not necessarily imply that she would have failed the IOC sex testing, after it was introduced.

It is impossible to be precise about the initial Olympic records set in the qualifying round at Sydney. There were two groups competing concurrently so the exact order of jumps between the two groups is not known. We have listed above the final qualifying mark of 4.30 set by 13 women and then followed the progression through the final
